

Policy 2: Declaration on Plagiarism

As the global representation of political science students, we are committed to the highest international standards of academic and scientific honesty. Therefore, we strictly refuse to accept any piece of work, oral or written that is a product of plagiarism. We subscribe to the definition of plagiarism of Oxford University, according to which:

“Plagiarism is presenting someone else’s work or ideas as your own, with or without their consent, by incorporating it into your work without full acknowledgement. All published and unpublished material, whether in manuscript, printed or electronic form, is covered under this definition. Plagiarism may be intentional or reckless, or unintentional.”¹

We required our members and other followers who are considering to submit a paper to one of IAPSS’ events, journals, or contribute to our blog, A Different View, to study the guidelines of Oxford University or similar guidelines² carefully and adhere to the referencing requirements listed therein.

All IAPSS members and external reviewers of papers are obliged to report every suspected instance of violation of standards of academic honesty to the respective IAPSS Board member [Editor-in-Chief] in case of IAPSS publications, Academic Program Coordinator in case of IAPSS conferences and other events]. Each of these instances will be examined closely by the respective Board member and judged in consultation with the respective member of the IAPSS Executive Committee.

Depending on the degree of seriousness of the offence, instances of plagiarism will result in various sanctions, such as the immediate rejection of a submission to an IAPSS publication without the right to submit a revised version, the refusal of the right to present the plagiarized piece at an IAPSS event even with a valid registration, up to termination of membership in an IAPSS structure or, in case of intentional offences, termination of IAPSS membership itself in accordance with the IAPSS Statutes.

In case of doubt, do not hesitate to send your questions and inquiries related to academic and scientific honesty to academic@iapss.org before you submit your paper or other contribution.
