

Platform Statement

Name : Shrey Madaan

Position : Regional Chair, Asia

It is a great privilege and honor to fill my nomination for the Position of Regional Chair, Asia in the International Association of Political Science Students, a student led youth organization focussing on international laws, political science and Public Relations. My various involvements with my current division and my experience of working in various national and international youth initiatives have enabled me to gain a great deal of insight into why the association holds a strong position. I believe that my long involvement in political sciences research places me in a strong position to truly understand the requirements and role to be fulfilled by the vice president of public relations. The time I have spent representing my country, my region and IAPSS as Country Coordinator places me to realize the key areas to address and resolve by the upcoming vice president of public relations. This experience guarantees that I will do justice to the position if elected.

This position perfectly aligns with my interests in political science, diplomacy, and foreign affairs. I consider it a vibrant experience to get the opportunity to meet students from all over the world and learn more about their values, culture and perception towards international affairs, something I experienced working with S.F.L (students for liberty) which helped me to broaden my horizons of knowledge about political sciences. I believe that I'm highly diligent, suave and pragmatic with excellent interpersonal / coordination skills. I believe that students in India should be made more aware about the political science and prospects it offers as an academic discipline and will work wholeheartedly to achieve that goal. Considering my desire to enrich knowledge of my peers in political science and international affairs, I believe I will be an asset to this esteemed organization.

I have familiarized myself with IAPSS's outstanding achievements in the arena of establishing a political science culture across multidisciplinary stances, academia and youth engagement. I am especially impressed by the methods this institution uses to bridge the gap and empower people to lead a positive change, something I experienced working in various projects with the ASIA team. An association that recognizes the gap of knowledge and provides a platform for critical thinking is something I admire which initially motivated me to apply for country coordinator position

The projects that I might undertake whilst my vice president of public relations position will be an excellent opportunity for me to interact with professionals and help me realize the methods I need to cultivate in order to bring about a change. I believe my unusual skill set for problem-solving would make me a valuable asset, inclusive of factors of having a strong policy background, good research-oriented skills, having understood the importance of contemporary affairs, diplomacy, facilitating greater youth engagement and maximizing outreach.

My major interests lie in communications and public outreach, and I plan to pursue further in the field of international relations. Furthermore, understanding the paradigm and the culture to enunciate an intellectual crossover of the political science culture in the realm of international relations is something I look forward to and motivates me even further to foster this political exchange and initiate new projects with a fresh outlook to our core beliefs.
